No one knows better than we do that he was in Savallette that night. As I told you, we were packing to leave the next day. The doors and windows were all wide open, with lights upstairs and down. So that when Mr. Stevens came up from the beach he called in from our front steps, saying he had caught some blue fish and would be glad to clean two for us to take home the next day if we wished them. Needless to say we accepted his offer. After a few minutes' chat he went home. That must have been 10:30 or a little later for we

Dear Mrs. Stevens,

Any additional preference to the New Brunswick case must be most distasteful to you but I just must write this.

We have been simply furious every time any reference has been made in the papers, to Mr. Stevens having any connection with it. This morning's Tribune states that he has been called once more for examination. Would the
